Pamela Ann Warren was born on September 5th, 1938, in Georgetown Guyana, Pamela passed peacefully on December 23rd, 2025, after a 15-year battle with dementia. She maintained her kindness, grace, compassion, and an appreciation of beauty, love of family and friends. Pamela loved to travel, especially before dementia set in. She left Georgetown, Guyana, and moved to London, England, at 16 years old after her mother passed on from diabetes. There she worked as a telephone operator and did nursing at Doctor Bernardo homes for a couple of years, and met her husband, the late Harold D. Stephen. Pamela had four children: Jennifer, Stephen, Suzanne Stephen, Raymond Stephen, and Lois Stephen. Five grandchildren. Sunnie Malik, Daisy Malik, Akash Malik, Asha Henman, and Dillon Dublin. Three great-grandchildren. Desmond Henman, Brown, Sienna Henman Brown, and Idris Henman Brown. Her only son drowned at 16 years old at Far Rockaway beach. These losses gave her resilience and the knowledge to know that the show must go on. Although she still felt sadness in her heart at times. Pamela received her associate's degree from Kingsborough Community College, where she studied Business Administration. She turned into a savvy business person and ventured into real estate when she moved to the United States of America in 1966. Pamela was born to parents, the late Barrick Warren and the late Gertrude Christiani. She had two sisters and one brother. The late Patricia Warren, the late Roy Warren, and Annette Rollins. Many years later, Pamela met her second husband, Keith Brown. She loved her family, and singing and dancing were special as well. As her illness progressed. She went to live with her youngest daughter, Lois Henman, who took care of her until she passed on at 87 years young.

“ I met Pamela due to her daughter and I doing business. On my first meeting, she gave me this beautiful smile, she was tall, elegant and stunning. A well spoken woman with confidence. I admired her. I told her daughter, Lois, “ Wow, you have one Beautiful mother, In looks and ways.” Pamela had Class and Grace. Something that a woman can't buy but had to inherit.
My deepest condolences to Lois and her entire family. May Pamela RIP & Rise in Glory. 🙏
